CUCS's Innovative and Integrated Approach Is Helping Individuals Experiencing Homelessness and Mental Illness Across New York City

Every day, CUCS's healthcare program Janian Medical Care works throughout our city building relationships with individuals experiencing homelessness and mental illness and connecting them with effective care.

As the largest provider of psychiatric care to homeless and formerly homeless people in New York City, our psychiatrists are at the cutting-edge of care when it comes to helping people with serious mental health illnesses. On the streets, in shelters and housing programs, and in communities throughout the city, we provide person-centered, recovery-oriented psychiatric care that integrates mental health, substance use help, and physical health to the most vulnerable New Yorkers.
